EDUCATION

Merakhi recognizes that smart jewelry alone won't solve the systemic issue of sexual assault. That is why education programs are so special to the company. At Merakhi, we believe that to wholly tackle the issue of sexual harassment and unsafe occurrences, we need to start by raising awareness from an early age. Not only is it important to teach children and young adults ways to be safe, but we believe it can make a significant difference when such methods are paired with lessons on mutual respect, tolerance, and empowerment to encourage the development of accepting communities.

Our education programs cover topics relevant to sexual assault like consent, sexual harassment, and safety for students in high schools. For elementary school students, Merakhi wants to educate kids on respect, confidence, and awareness of their surroundings and their feelings.

Two of our members Khushi and Kim have already begun providing some education sessions at local New Jersey public schools. Most recently, they collaborated with Point Pleasant High School's senior health classes to present about consent, sexual harassment and safety, particularly as it relates to college campuses to get the students prepared and aware beforehand. We got great feedback from both students and faculty and can't wait to continue developing the program and educating others!
